President

The State University College at Cortland extends a sincere welcome to our guests and respected rivals in competitive sports.

Intercollegiate sport, with its traditional background of amateurism embraces one of the finest and most wholesome activities of a college co-curricular program. The spirit from which it stems, the perseverance and stamina necessary for success, and the emotional stability required for protracted friendly rivalry accentuate the potential educational values inherent in its conduct. Football is a strenuous game played by rugged men.

We hope the team fielded by our guests today will be at their best and that our own Cortland team is capable of top performance. May the sportsmanship manifested today be of the highest order and may the better team win.

C O R T L A N D

Saturday afternoon football is part of the collegiate tradition. It is a dramatic spectacle which thrills spectators and stimulates players to valiant feats.

For the moment, the question of victory or defeat seems all important. Yet behind each intercollegiate competition are the more important values that make athletic contests a part of the total educational enterprise.

We of the College at Cortland welcome the visiting team and other friends as guests of the College. We trust that the contest you are seeing will exemplify amateur athletics at its best.

VIEWS FROM THE PRESS BOX

by Irving Simpson, Publicity Director

Coach Carl A. (Chugger) Davis, when asked what he and his staff planned to stress this week in preparation for today's game with C. W. Post stated simply, "everything".

Not that the veteran coach was displeased with the Red Dragons performance last Saturday when they beat Alfred, 19-12, but he did feel that the team would need to go through the entire gamut of drills before it would be ready to take on a tough opponent like today's visitor.

In fact, Davis expressed some pleasure with Cortland's showing against Alfred, but hesitated to single out individuals for special praise because so many had figured in the victory.

One note of regret was the loss of Thomas Sharp, junior halfback from Jamestown, who had only two chances to show his exceptional speed before he was injured. He is out for the season.

On the plus side is the possible return of junior halfback Charles George of Syracuse, one of Cortland's best defensive backs, who missed the first game.

Sophomore halfback Paul Duda of Watertown was an important factor in the victory over Alfred as he figured in all three of the Cortland touchdowns. He passed to sophomore end Joe Velsini of Port Henry for one TD, caught a pass from senior quarterback Michael Nugent of Salamanca for the second tally and grabbed an aerial from Donald Jack King, junior halfback from Fairport, for the winning touchdown.

King's pass caught almost everyone napping especially the Saxons, as he lobbed the ball left-handed the 19 yards to Duda standing in the end zone.

Duda indicated last year that he would be a future varsity prospect when he helped to end the junior varsity's 17-game losing streak. He ran a kickoff back 78 yards and then passed for a conversion in Cortland's 20-19 victory over the St. Lawrence University freshmen.

Another sophomore, fullback Richard Cameron of Fort Edward, earned considerable attention as a hard-running fullback. He is currently Cortland's leading ball-carrier with 46 yards in eight attempts and an average of 5.7 per carry. Cameron also intercepted an Alfred pass late in the game to stall a Saxon threat at the Cortland 14.

Also figuring in the Cortland rushing in double figures last Saturday, in addition to Duda and Cameron, were junior halfback Robert Sutton of New Rochelle, King and Sharp.

Senior quarterback Frank McGarvey of Pearl River returned to action after a year's absence. Although having trouble getting underway on offense, he proved a standout on defense and set up Cortland's second touchdown as he recovered an Alfred fumble on the 3.

Another sophomore who deserves special mention is end Velsini, who not only scored the Dragons' first touchdown, but also set up the winning TD when he gathered in an Alfred fumble on the Saxons' 19.

Later he snuffed out Alfred's last threat when he caught the Saxons' star back, Joe Renwick and threw him for a 15-yard loss as the game ended.

Veteran Richard Gnida, senior from Somers was back at his old post of guard and showed he had lost none of his ability as an interior lineman during his assignment last season as an end. He also recovered an Alfred fumble on the Cortland 20 only to see his effort nullified on the next play as the Dragons fumbled and returned the ball to Alfred.

There were many other Dragons who had a hand in the Cortland victory whose efforts are not always recorded in the statistics.

Cortland is still looking for its first victory over today's visitor, the pioneers of C. W. Post. The series began here in 1960 and Post won the first game, 23-12.

Last year the Dragons traveled to Long Island for the second meeting and lost a real thriller, 7-13, after a desperation pass by Cortland was dropped on the goal line.

The Pioneers that arrived today fresh from a 7-6 victory over St. Lawrence are a veteran club with a rugged line and some exceptional break-away speed in the backfield. A total of 20 lettermen are on this season's roster.

The line features veterans from tackle to tackle at least two deep and the backfield has the veteran Frank Scicchitano, who can play quarterback, halfback and split end and is extremely fast.

Next Saturday the Dragons will be at the University of Bridgeport for their first encounter with the Connecticut college. The following Saturday, Oct. 13, Cortland will be at home to meet Ithaca College in the annual homecoming game.

DR. ROSS L. ALLEN

Director of Education
Health, Physical Education and Recreation

State University College at Cortland has always given intercollegiate athletics its deserved position in the education of college youth. This is manifest by the unusually extensive and comprehensive program that we have developed in a College of this size. Our program in athletics has not been developed by administrative edict; it is the result of the desire and support of students, faculty, and administration for such a program. It will continue and develop as long as this combined support remains. Today you are seeing but one aspect of a very broad program in intercollegiate athletics that is making its contribution to the development and total education of our students. Welcome!

C O R T L A N D

Cortland State is proud of its intercollegiate athletic program. The sports offering is most extensive. The athletic program consists of twelve varsity teams and six junior-varsity or freshman teams. The college maintains membership in the NCAA and NYSIAC and the athletic program is financed by student fees. Last year the Cortland Dragons participated in a total of 114 varsity contests, winning 68 and losing 46 for a percentage of 60%.

THE COACHING STAFF

CARL "CHUGGER" DAVIS has been the head football coach at Cortland since 1932 and holds the distinction of being the second oldest in years of service, among the 121 members of the Eastern College Athletic Conference. He also ranks 13th in the country in number of years in football. During those years his teams have won 103 games, lost 64 and tied 17. In his first five seasons at Cortland the Red Dragons lost only two games out of 33. Four of his teams, those of 1942, 1948, 1955 and 1957, lost only one game during the season. Davis graduated from two Springfield Colleges, one in his native Missouri for his undergraduate work and the other in Massachusetts for a master's degree. He was an outstanding athlete in both high school and college. He gave up playing baseball only a few years ago after he had managed and played for the Homer Braves, a team that included some of today's Milwaukee Braves. Davis also coached basketball and baseball at Cortland for many years. He gave up the Cortland baseball team in 1958 to take over the golf team, which was a pleasant move for Davis, who spends many of his free hours on the golf course.

ROBERT J. WEBER contributes a wealth of experience to the Cortland line coach's job. Now in his 11th season on the Cortland staff, Weber also has been the director of athletics for the past six years. A native of Iowa, he coached high school football there after his graduation from the University of Iowa where he played center for Dr. Eddie Anderson. His final two years of high school coaching saw his teams lose only one game and win the conference championship.

Weber also played for service teams at Fort Benning and in Germany, and he has also coached basketball and golf. He does most of the scouting of Cortland opponents.

ROBERT WALLACE once played in the backfield that he now coaches. A 1953 graduate of Cortland, Wallace played quarterback for Davis for three years and was rated one of the college's top signal callers. Before joining the Cortland staff in 1956, he coached two championship football teams at Painted Post High School. Since coming to Cortland he has filled in one year as the varsity basketball coach and since 1958, he has been the baseball coach and a successful one. His baseball team has been the New York State Interscholastic Athletic Conference champion twice.

DONALD SAZIMA begins his third season with the junior varsity football coaching assignment. Sazima joined the Cortland faculty after six years at Lincoln Park Hill School in Michigan where he coached football, basketball and track. He is a graduate of Bowling Green University where he competed in football and track. He also attended the University of Michigan where he earned a master's degree.

ARTHUR J. RIEDEL has joined the coaching staff this season as the end coach. A Cortland graduate, he played football and basketball here and since 1956 has been a physical education teacher and coach at Baldwinsville in the elementary and junior high school. Riedel, who also holds a master's degree from Cortland, is an assistant in the Director of Admissions office.

Football and Fitness

Football has given me some of the most pleasant and exciting moments of my life, from a Harvard-Yale game I saw 40 years ago to last year's Army-Navy game. I remember my 21st birthday not as the day I became eligible to vote, but as the day Michigan's great Tom Harmon scored 21 points in the first half of a game against California. Many of my boyhood heroes were football stars, and I still thrill to a long run, a solid block, or a good tackle. In short, I am like a lot of other Americans who never quite made the team but love the game.

I sometimes wonder whether those of us who love football fully appreciate its great lesson: that dedication, discipline, and teamwork are necessary to success. We take it for granted that the players will spare no sacrifice to become alert, strong, and skilled, that they will give their best on the field. This is as it should be, and we must never expect less, but I am extremely anxious that its implications not be lost upon us.

In a large sense, all of us are engaged in a struggle more fiercely-contested, and far more important to our future, than you are witnessing here today. It is the struggle for the hearts, the minds, and the souls of men, and there are no spectators—only players. It is a struggle which will test our courage, our strength, and our stamina, and only if we are physically, mentally, and spiritually fit can we win.

In the past, on many occasions, I have expressed the belief that physical fitness is necessary to all other forms of excellence, that only the active, vigorous person can fully realize his potential. I have constantly urged parents, schools, and communities to provide their youngsters the vigorous activity necessary to healthy development. I repeat this plea now.

The young men on the field today did five or ten minutes of calisthenics just to prepare for 60 minutes of hard football. The exercises loosen their muscles, key their senses, and put them in the proper frame of mind to play. Yet, many American boys and girls cannot do one pullup, or even raise themselves to a sitting position without using their hands. Perhaps some of them are in the stands today.

A recent survey of the schools revealed that one-fourth of our children are physically underdeveloped, and that half are substandard in some phase of strength, stamina, agility, or flexibility. At the time, I described these statistics as "shocking." I will go even further: they indicate a threat to the continued vigor, growth, and freedom of America.

Fortunately, there is a way to solve our fitness problem. Working with 19 leading educational and medical organizations, my Council on Youth Fitness has outlined a program which, if adopted in every school, will enable our children to build the strength and energy which are their rightful heritage. The program suggests (1) a health appraisal for every child; (2) a physical screening process to identify underdeveloped children; (3) at least 15 minutes of vigorous activity as part of a daily physical education program, and (4) periodic achievement tests to measure progress and provide incentive.

I strongly urge you to see that your child has the opportunity to participate in such a program. Not just so that he might become a football player someday—although that would be fine, too—but so that he will be able to live imaginatively, confidently, and usefully.

Remember, all of our children are on your team. We can do no less than to see that they are fit—fit to learn, fit to understand, fit to grow in grace and stature, and fit to serve our nation in its hour of need.

FWAA President Tells . . .

Why I Like College Football

by BERT McGRANE

President of Football Writers Association of America

Des Moines Register & Tribune

Old memories must be best. They last longer. This conclusion popped up on a lazy morning as I played mental hop-scotch through the years in search of the half dozen most memorable football games I've watched from assorted pressboxes. My list, I discovered, included three games that were played within the past decade. For the others I reached back 19, 31 and 36 years.

Every college generation, I reasoned, has contributed to the fascinating fiber of college football.

It may be readily assumed that the elements involved in my "big" games are scoring, tough competition and drama galore. There are some other factors but the fury of the battle and the remarkable surge of a team that isn't supposed to win will never be overshadowed. Perhaps the one thing above all others that makes college football such a captivating sport is its uncertainty. You just never can tell.

Just why does a fellow get all steamed up over college football, and stay that way year after year?

In my case football is by far the most spectacular spectator sport. It is a game of strategy and violence. Good football must be played with the precision of golf, or baseball. It involves the dynamic action of boxing, or hockey.

Football compels attention.

Not long ago a television network scheduled a late-season game for presentation on the screens of the nation. Seems like the teams were Utah and Utah State, and many a fan in the Big Ten country growled. But they watched the telecast and were intrigued. The scoffers stayed to cheer. The wide-open play was a lasting reminder that the football in the Rocky Mountain sector, or any other area is all engrossing.

When we say football we refer to the college brand. We had it long before the professional game became a factor. Indeed, the highly specialized professional game carries an appeal of its own, but it could hardly have materialized without the contributions of the schools.

College football, with its unpredictable aspects, has no rival. Just try to name a professional sport in which 30 or more writers and a conference commissioner are ordered off a practice field. It happened in the Big Ten. There is novelty and fun, sometimes even consternation.

A lasting memory centers around an incident at Harvard, during the opening game of 1950. Platoon football was going strong, so an ingenious band master applied the same principle to his band. He substituted by platoons. A blast of the whistle and the trombone players raced off the field and replacements with more trombones raced in, etc.

In a game on the West Coast we sensed the anguish of the followers of a great school. A rival had "loused up" the card section operation so that it spelled out the name of the rival rather than its own.

We recall that during the war years the commander of a great training station usurped the pressbox for his party, when it started to rain during a game. Football isn't all live or die. It has its variety.

Football, as I see it, is a vast composite, responsible to no individual for its appeal but owing something and giving something to every man who plays.

The Heffelfingers and the Brickleys and Poes; the Nagurskis, the Sammy Baughs and the Doak Walkers; the Harmons, the Berwangers and the Hopalong Cassadys—these and the unsung thousands applied the teachings and carried on the demonstrations of technique for the Camps, the Ropers, the Haughtons, the Staggs, the Rocknes, the Biermans, the Wilkinsons, the Bibles, the Blaiks, the Bells, the Joneses and the Cavanaughs. And for all others who have put football teams on the field.

For more than 80 years college football has been advancing toward its place as a national institution in America. Its traditions, its drama and its intense rivalries should add to its prestige as its history lengthens.

Much Ado in '62

by TED SMITS

General Sports Editor, The Associated Press

College football in 1962 is being moulded by the personalities of the men who coach it, by the talent of the men who play it, and by one interesting change in the rules.

The rule change permits the kicking team to down the ball within the opponent's 10 yard line. Previously this was a touch-back, bringing the ball out to the 20 yard line. The new refinement puts an even high premium on punting, and brings into play downfield blocking where previously a polite game of tag was played.

It puts a premium, too, on catching the ball and running it out—and that could make for excitement in the form of fumbles and more scoring opportunities.

There now seems to be general agreement that the rule on substitutions is free enough to bring into action all the talent that a team has, when it needs it. It isn't platoon football. It is tribe football.

There is a subtle change that has been under way for some time and only now is coming into full flower. That is the requirement that a quarterback should be something more than just a good thrower. He must be a tailback as well, a resourceful and heady runner, particularly if effective passes are to develop out of plays that start out as sweeps.

All this put together—more punting, more opportunities for fumbles in the shadow of the goal line, fluid substitutions, quarterbacks who both pass and run—adds up to a sparkling offensive game.

Wider use of the winged-T and of the lonesome end has also opened up the college game for the better. Although the single wing still has its staunch adherents—and when beautifully executed there isn't a prettier game—the trend to the T with all its variations continues unabated.

Just as the offense has become more brilliant, so, too, has the defense. The "Oklahoma style" defense of five men on the line with the other six positioned to guard against passes or runs has been giving way to a six-man front with the tackles wide. There is even a tendency to an eight-man front line on defense.

Along with all these theories and the touch-back rule change making for an open, interesting game there has been a determination on the part of officialdom to protect the players from injury. Too many men were hurt last year, with the result that orders went out to enforce to the letter the rules against piling on the ball carrier, and clipping. That explains the whistle blowing you hear.

There is mathematical proof that all these developments are a delight to behold. Attendance at college football games in 1961 increased for the eighth consecutive year to an all-time record total of 20,677,604 in games at 616 senior colleges. This was 274,195 more spectators than set the previous attendance record in 1960. Everything points to another new high mark in 1962.

So now spread before you is the game of football. It is as old as recorded history—the combination of willing men and a ball that can be kicked. It is also eternally new, changing subtly through the years, but retaining an emotional hold on spectators and participants alike. The bond that unites everyone within a stadium, regardless of partisanship, comes from the season of the year, from friendships and campus memories, from the vivid colors on the field, and above all from the high drama of the game itself.
